The objective of this project was to establish a sign that fostered and reflected, once complete, a sense of ownership and responsibility to the skate park for local young people. It was also a goal of HOYE Inc to support the building of stronger community partnerships, which was aided by the support of the Tilligerry Men's Shed who provided a workplace for sign construction.

The sign was designed by local young people who were involved in a series of design workshops hosted by Hands On Youth Events Inc (HOYE). At the workshops the young people worked with public artist Marion Giles, who was employed by HOYE Inc, to develop a concept design. The young people also contributed old bike/scooter/skateboard parts.

In partnership with the Mallabula Parks and Gardens 355c Committee the garden bed at the skate park was renovated and the sign installed in November 2014.
