Fern Bay shared path | August 2021

We know you value accessibility and pathway connections in Fern Bay – that's why we're starting work on a major shared pathway project in Fern Bay.

Project details

The shared path project for Fern Bay will be 1.7km long and will provide a much needed safe link for both pedestrians and cyclists. The extent and staging plan for these works is shown over the page.

Stage 1 — Between Vardon and Taylor Roads

Commencing in August, this stage involves the construction of a new 430 metre path between Vardon and Taylor Roads.

The new shared path will replace the existing narrow footpath and will be suitable for both pedestrians and cyclists.

Access to properties will be maintained during the works and stage 1 construction is expected to take 8 to 10 weeks, weather permitting.

Stage 2 — Between Bayway Village and Vardon Road and between Taylor and Braid Roads

This stage will be delivered once the necessary approvals are in place. These sections of path are subject to an Aboriginal Cultural Heritage Assessment and application for an Aboriginal Heritage Impact Permit if required. These approvals can take several months to obtain.

It is expected that stage 2 construction will begin in May 2022.

What's the difference between a shared path and a footpath?

Shared paths are 2 to 2.5m wide and allows space for both pedestrians and cyclists. Footpaths are generally 0.8 to 1.2m wide and are designed for pedestrian use.
